

A brother should always be there
for his kin.

SPIRITS

The C. V. C. Hunt & Co.

The Soul Collector

BY COLIN LAWLER
& JOSEPH GRABOWSKI

I think
I'm...

a bad older
brother.

There,
there, lad.

Don't be
so harsh on
yourself.

I'm sure
you're doing
just fine.

Sometimes
things are just
out of our
control.

Right,
Lux?

Indeed.

Boy, I've
got a story for
you. Mayhaps
it'll help.

As Narah here
could tell ya, Lewa
and my old comrade,
Rengo, had fallen in
love a while back.

It was tough at first because Rengo is a decent fella, and was hesitant to come between the two of us.

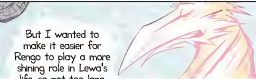

Lux and Lewa were practically indivisible.

You see, Lewa and I
weren't just family, we were also partners in the Light Fractions- for ages!

It occupied
the majority of our time.

But I wanted to
make it easier for Rengo to play a more
shining role in Lewa's
life, so not too long
ago I retired from
the Fractions,
and put in an official
recommendation for Rengo to take
my position.

So...

it should have
been you there
with Lewa...

not Rengo?

Aye, Will.
It should have
been me.

And I've been
half the spirit ever
since that day.

I should
have been
there for
Kenny.

I shouldn't
have called my
brother Fort-

who knew

a name like
that would linger?

Okay,
everyone.

Please.

Let's keep
it together.

These pestering
emotion spirits
are starting to
multiply.

What are

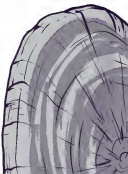

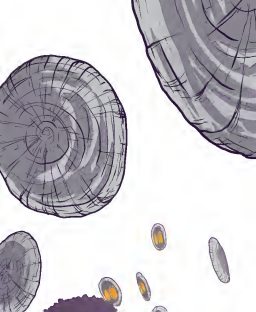

these things?!

What are
they doing!?

Thank you for reading.
We love you.
